GRASPING OPPORTUNITY.

Whatever may be charged as Teddy Roosevelt's motives in his present campaign, whether we agree that he is sincere or that he is playing a political game, it must be agreed that he has taken hold of an inviting opportunity at a most opportune time, and will be able to lead a great host of American people with him. Roosevelt is shrewd enough to know that the people have grown weary of waiting for the republican party to make good its promises, and despondent of the democrats having the opportunity to reform the government, if indeed they were so minded, and they are looking about, many of them, for a leader who will use a big stick and compel the square deal. It has been demonstrated that the republicans are long on promises but short on performance; that the special interests have a strong hold on the political powers, and the public mind is ready for some one to offer relief. And this is where Teddy comes in. He says that dishonesty in politics has got to stop, even if he has to suffer another term as president to stop it, and many believe he can stop it, and will. At this time no man knows where Roosevelt will lead his followers; he may lead them to mountain tops of political purity, or he may drill them foot sore and weary back into the same old camp of the republican party. But one thing must be admitted, and that is that he has a big bunch of them with him. His own party realizes it, and the democrats appreciate the strength of his position. It, in the language of the street, is up to Teddy.

The Willis Point Chronicle crowds a volume of wisdom into this paragraph: "There is no end of fun in minding your own business, and it makes people like you better. It is better to have others stuck on you than to get stuck on yourself. Don't knock; don't get stubborn. Don't roast; just jolly. Everybody likes to be jollied. Be a good fellow—it's dead easy. Help yourself along, push your friend with you. No man ever helped himself by 'knocking' other people. You can't climb the ladder of fame by stepping on other people's corns; they are their corns, not yours, and they are tender. Help everybody; get hold with both hands when there is a chance to help your town. Bury your hatchet, drop your tomahawk, and hide your little hammer. Be a booster."

Anderson county offers the people seeking homes land at a cost of fifteen dollars an acre on which fourteen-year-old boys this year grew an average of seventy-two bushels of corn to the acre. If any country with land at any price can beat it, show us. One boy, just turning fifteen years of age, grew a crop this year, and on one acre of ground he grew sixty bushels of Irish potatoes, sold for $1.00 per bushel, twelve bushels of peas, sold for about $2.00 per bushel, and forty-two bushels of corn, sold for $1.00. And the beauty of this, and is that it always produces.

The city commissioners should make one resolution right now before the wet season sets in: To never allow the clay streets that have been packed this summer to be loosened up for any purpose during the winter. A ploughed clay street in wet weather is the limit of all bad streets.

Champ Clark promises to drive a team of Missouri mules down Pennsylvania avenue if he is made speaker of the house in the next congress. Don't do it, Champ; that is one of the troubles with the democratic party now; too many donkeys have been driven down the avenue. The speaker is not required to be a clown. Ask Uncle Joe, it's a serious business. Ask Uncle Joe again.

Write about Anderson county, talk about the county, and boost for it. If every man in the town and county would become a booster in earnest the fame of this section would soon be heard of far and near.

Telegraphic reports from Maine today indicate that the democrats swept in all of the offices in yesterday's election. It was a good day's work, and the democratic country will now rejoice.

Poor Old Daddy will now have to rake his pockets clean buying school books that Arabella and Sydney Joe may acquire that knowledge necessary to life.

POLITICS AND POLITICIANS.

Rhode Island democrats will hold their state and congressional conventions September 29.

The republican state campaign in Ohio will be formally opened at Kenton on September 17.

Sterling P. Bond of St. Louis has declared his candidacy for the democratic nomination to succeed United States Senator Warner of Missouri.

Oklahoma republicans will meet in Guthrie September 29 to ratify the nomination of their ticket and to formally open their state campaign.

W. Jefferson Davis, private secretary to Senator Purcell of North Dakota, is the new president of the National League of Democratic College Clubs.

Democrats of Georgia, at their recent state convention, endorsed Governor Hoke Smith for the democratic nomination for president of the United States in 1912.

In Rhode Island the question, "Who shall be chosen to succeed Nelson W. Aldrich in the United States senate?" at present eclipses all other political issues.

Former Lieutenant Governor John C. McKinley of Missouri has filed his declaration as a candidate for the United States senate on the republican ticket to succeed Senator Warner.

Charles S. Hamlin, a Boston lawyer who was assistant secretary of the treasury during one of the Cleveland administrations, is mentioned as a possible candidate for governor of Massachusetts on the democratic ticket.

The labor organizations of Indiana have taken up the cause of United States Senator Beveridge and have compiled a pamphlet addressed to union men in which they are urged to support legislative candidates who favor his return to the senate.

The National American Woman Suffrage Association has taken steps to find out exactly how each candidate for congress stands on the question of suffrage for women. To each nominee a letter is to be sent asking him to state his views on the subject.

Though both state conventions in Massachusetts are near at hand the political alignment is not yet clearly defined. Governor Eben S. Draper, republican, is understood to be the choice for the third term. There are several candidates for the place at the head of the democratic ticket.

Heroic efforts are to be made to save the seat of Representative E. B. Slomp of the Ninth Virginia district, the only republican member of the Old Dominion delegation in congress. Former President Roosevelt and Speaker Cannon have promised to appear on the stump in behalf of Slomp's candidacy for re-election.

The result of the canvass of the votes of the recent Nebraska primary elections on members of the legislature shows that the Oregon plan will almost certainly be carried out in the election of a United States senator to succeed Senator Elmer J. Burkett, regardless of the political complexion of the next legislature.

Congressman Walter I. Smith of the Ninth Iowa district, who is looked upon as an open candidate for the speakership of the house of representatives, in opposition to Speaker Cannon, has been a member of the lower house continuously since 1900. Prior to his election to congress he had served for ten years as a judge of the Iowa district court.

The cut extended across the abdomen and is deep, twenty-seven stitches being required in sewing it up. The difficulty took place in the dark, it is said, and it is not known here who did the cutting. No arrests have yet been made.

Boy Stabbed His Father.

Giddings, Texas, Sept. 12.—Ben Simmons, who about one year ago was charged with having killed his father and made good his escape, returned here Saturday and surrendered to the officers. Simmons and his father were on their return home from Thorndale last November, when they engaged in a dispute. The father used a whip on the boy, who tried to get out of the way, but, it is alleged, that the boy's father kept abusing and pursuing him, and he then cut his father with his pocket knife, from the effects of which he died. The examining trial was held here Saturday and his bond fixed at $750, which has not been given up to this date.

RECORDS CRUMBLE

At the Harvard-Boston Aero Meet. Marvelous Performances.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 12.—One world's record and two American records were broken by the flyers at the Harvard-Boston aero meet today. Ralph Johnstone, in a Wright biplane, made new marks in accuracy, duration and distance events. An achievement no less marvelous was a flight of Claude Graham-White of England, in which he went twice to Boston Light and return, a distance of 33 miles, in 34 minutes, 15 seconds, or about a mile a minute for the entire distance, using a Blériot monoplane.

A feature of slightly less interest was target shooting from an aeroplane with a regulation service rifle by Lieutenant J. E. Finkel, a sharp shooter. The army officer went up with Charles F. Willard, who went round and round the field while the marksman cracked away at the target on the ground. There was a large percentage of hits and from an experimental standpoint the work was considered highly satisfactory and valuable.

Johnstone then went up for his duration and distance and accuracy marks, in all of which he made new records. He remained in the air 3 hours, 4 minutes and 44 seconds, which broke the American record by Clifford B. Harmon of New York by 1 hour and 10 minutes and 30 seconds. On the same trip he covered 97 miles, 446 feet, which is likewise a new American record, bettering Harmon's mark by some seven miles. Descending from his long journey, Johnstone planted his car almost exactly over the flag in a test for accuracy, his seat being but 5 feet 4 inches from the flag, which made a new world's record for accuracy in landing on skids.

DIAMOND CUT DIAMOND

By LEONARD MALLOY

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

"I saw Jenkins the other day," said Brown to the old customs inspector who had exposed more smugglers than any other man in the department, "and he told me to ask you the next time I saw you to tell me the romance of your marriage."

"Oh, he did, did he?" replied the inspector, scowling, but in spite of himself puckering up the corners of his mouth in a smile.

"Yes, he said there was quite a story connected with your courtship."

"Courtship be hanged!"

"Oh, go on!"

Brown offered the inspector a cigar, telling him to light up. The bribe was accepted and the story given.

"You know that tradesmen abroad are interested in learning ways by which their customers may evade paying duties on goods, because if the goods can be got in free of duty it's very much easier for the tradesmen to sell them. Some of these people know more ingenious tricks for evading duties than the regular smugglers."

"Well, one day the boss called me into his private office and, taking up a letter a friend of his had received, read it to me. It was an offer of a jeweler in London to deliver goods in America free of duty."

"How do you suppose it's done?" he asked me.

"I don't know," I replied.

"I tell you what you do. Go over there, get in with the jeweler and find out. I'll get you a letter of introduction from his correspondent so that he'll feel obliged to show you some attention—perhaps invite you to his house. You can't find out anything in his shop, but you may run across something at home that will give away the trick."

"The result was that I took the next outgoing liner and within a week was in London. We had a good many trunks in storage held for some reason or other that had been all over Europe and were covered with hotel labels. I had taken off a dozen of these labels and pasted them on my own trunk. I did this because I intended to appear as having been traveling on the continent. I delivered my letter to the jeweler, an elderly man named Hicks. He received me very kindly and, as it was stated in the letter that I wished to bring home with me some jewels for my sister, offered to show me his stock at once. To this I replied that I was in no hurry and I would like to see something of London before my return. As I expected, he offered to show me around.

"He took me to theaters, the Tower, the abbey and all that, but I didn't see the inside of his home. Then I began to ask him about his family—we had got pretty thick by this time—and he asked me to dine with him and his family. I met in this way his niece, who lived with him, and it wasn't long after that when I dispensed with the services of the jeweler for a guide and took the niece. I was getting to that age when a man feels flattered by a young woman's attentions, and the first thing that I knew I was dead set on taking her back with me to America. English girls, you know, have a very pleasant accent, and many of them can show the finest complexions in the world. Emily Robinson was one of that kind, and her kittenish ways were just the thing to catch an old bachelor like myself. She was glad enough to get a husband who would make her independent, and before I left London we were not only engaged, but married.

"Of course I felt guilty at trying to find out how her uncle got goods free of duty into America, but anyway I could only stop his doing it. I could not punish him, he being an Englishman and in London. So I added matrimony with his niece to a detective ruse with him. We were married a few days before the steamer sailed, and I bought about the same time $10,000 worth of diamonds, which my uncle-in-law agreed to deliver in New York free of duty."

"I took my wife with me to my hotel, and the loneliness of the place was dispelled at once. She was very practical and insisted on packing my trunk. I always hated that part of traveling and was glad enough to turn the matter over to her. We dined the day before sailing with her uncle and aunt and had a very jolly time. When we reached home my wife put my good clothes on the top of the other things already packed in my trunk and locked it. Then she began to look at the labels and said how she wished we had met before my tour instead of after it, as she would like to visit those places herself. I kissed her and promised her a trip just as soon as I could arrange to be again absent from business.

"When we reached home I told the boss that some diamonds were to come to us and we would have no trouble tracing how they reached us. My wife said the day after we got home that she didn't feel well and must ask me to unpack my trunk. I did so and at the bottom found a box I didn't recognize. I opened it and was astonished to see the diamonds sold by my British uncle-in-law. They had been put there by my wife.

"I looked at her.

"She burst out laughing.

"You wouldn't wish me to go back on uncle, would you?" she said.

"It was five minutes before I replied. Then I put my arms around her, with the remark, 'You're a Jim dandy.'"

Spain's King Enjoys Visits Among Relatives

King Alfonso has enjoyed many visits with relatives in other countries since his marriage to an English princess, but none are said to have been more delightful to the young monarch and father than the one recently made to the British Isles, where he was an interested spectator at yacht races and various fetes arranged in his honor. The picture shows the king of Spain as he was leaving the pier after a race with Prince Maurice of Battenburg.

WHY THEY FAIL.

Most Pile Remedies Miss the Cause of Piles.

Disagreeable treatment with ointments or suppositories usually fails to cure piles and cutting them off won't remove the cause. Such treatment only moderates the outside effects of the disease and fails to remedy the inside cause. The up-to-date doctors now use internal medicine, to free the circulation in the lower bowel, and so remove the disease.

Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid, the first and only guaranteed internal pile cure—in the form of tablets—cures any kind of piles. Sold by Stratton Drug Co., Palestine, Texas. $1 for large box. Dr. Leonhardt Co., Station B, Buffalo, N. Y.
